Paul Blustein's And the Money Kept Rolling In (and Out) Wall Street, the IMF, and the Bankrupting of Argentina is an EXCELLENT macro-economic companion to Aguirre's book as Blustein chronicles the IMF's engagement and decision making that delayed and deepened the depression and chaos in Argentina. First published in March 2005, this book walks the reader into behind-the-curtain meetings, memos and decision making as Argentina struggled with its debt load.

Che describes Eva's controversial charitable work, and possible money laundering ("And the Money Kept Rolling In (And Out)"). Eva appears at a church to take the sacrament in front of her adoring supporters ("Santa Evita"), but passes out suddenly, and while unconscious, appears to have a dream that reflects upon the conflicting views of her life. In her dream, she and Che heatedly debate her actions; Che accuses Eva of using the Argentine people for her own ends, while Eva cynically replies ...
