"Books are the best medium for many artists working today," Sol LeWitt (1928-2007) once declared. A pioneer of artist's books, and co-founder of New York's Printed Matter bookstore in 1976, LeWitt is closely identified with the book as an art form. Starting with 1967's Serial Project No. 1 (from Aspen magazine), and closing with Chicago (Morning Star Publications, 2002), this book reproduces covers and spreads from Sol LeWitt's massive oeuvre of artist's books, almost all of which are now rarities. As artist's book historian Clive Phillpot notes, "the principle attribute of LeWitt's books is one common to all books: a dependence upon sequence, whether of families of marks or objects, or of single or permuted series which have clear beginnings and endings." Critical observations from LeWitt himself and a variety of scholars make this volume the most sustained treatment of LeWitt's prolific activity in this area to date. Class-tested and coherent, this

It gives an up-to-date treatment of all aspects of the design and implementation of systems for gathering, indexing, and searching documents; methods for evaluating systems; and an introduction to the use of machine learning methods on text collections. All the important ideas are explained using examples and figures, making it perfect for introductory courses in information retrieval for

Based on feedback from extensive classroom experience, the book has been carefully structured in order to make teaching more natural and effective. Slides and additional exercises (with solutions for lecturers) are also available through the book's supporting website to help course instructors prepare their lectures. The Book Binding Handbook shows readers how to make their own books with detailed step-by-step instructions, diagrams, and full-color illustrations. There are chapters dealing with simple

There are gallery sections included for inspiration, with examples of work by practicing book artists, binders, and students, which show ways in which the projects described throughout the book can be developed. The first half of this book deals with getting started, making your own decorative papers, basic techniques, and an introduction to different types of book forms, while the remaining essays and images charting the last ten years of Portuguese artist Daniel Blaufuks' practice, published on the occasion of his exhibition at Ffotogallery. The distinct black & white format of the book is based on designs by the French publishing imprint Série Noire who released detective thrillers in the 1950s. Daniel Blaufuks is an artist fascinated by the processes of memory - how we construct meaning in our lives through the accrual of details and traces, from the mental residue and after-images of our daily existence. Blaufuks is interested not only in the ways that photography and film are changing as media, but also in the methods by which we archive, store and retrieve information - our ability to remember. Blaufuks' photographic images of film canisters, cassette tapes, celluloid film strips and negatives etc. remind us that as each analogue 'memory container' is superceded by new technological developments, our capacity to record data may increase exponentially, but something is also lost in the process. With a keen eye Blaufuks observes these evolutionary changes in the way we make, distribute and read images, curious to understand how our future memory will be different. For Blaufuks, photography is more than simply a trigger for retrieving past memories. Photography is memory. Introduction to

Information Retrieval

In 1977 Peter Milne was 17 and the legendary Australian guitarist Rowland S Howard was 18. For several months they collaborated together on a number of photo sessions. Although many of the images taken in that period were lost or damaged, a number of remarkable photographs have survived and have been drawn together to form this book. Peter Milne writes in the introduction to the book: "I took up photography around this time and we began a busy period of experimental photo sessions during which

The first critical study of writing without language In recent years, asemic writing—writing without language—has exploded in popularity, with anthologies, a large-scale art exhibition, and flourishing interest on sites like tumblr, YouTube,

Pinterest, and Instagram. Yet this burgeoning, fascinating field has never received a dedicated critical study. Asemic fills that gap, proposing new ways of rethinking the nature of writing. Pioneered in the work of creators such as Henri Michaux, Roland Barthes, and Cy Twombly, asemic writing consolidated as a movement in the 1990s. Author Peter Schwenger first covers these “asemic ancestors” before moving to current practitioners such as Michael Jacobson, Rosaire Appel, and Christopher Skinner, exploring how asemic writing has evolved and gained importance in the contemporary era. Asemic includes intriguing revelations about the relation of asemic writing to Chinese characters, the possibility of asemic writing in nature, and explanations of how we can read without language. Written in a lively style, this book will engage scholars of

A Photo Book of Myth Dream Experiences is intended a page turning work to series of art. It is composed of nine Chapters and dozen upon dozen of photo. The text compares and contrasts Freud or Jung idea of dreams in sensory memory or unmet intent versus the myth of entity and angel. Chapters include the idea to reflect of actual experience or sensory memory versus to describe the inflation to a higher story. The book works more from a Classical Greek set of works from Aristotle and references are found. Memory is then a context and a duration or lapse in time to relive a past idea. The dream is a set of symbols and to be formed into a story. Aristotle calls the lead or walk to be assembled by the soul; whom he describes to source the motive force of such symbol. The logos are a sort of white and bleaching experience. His work about Metaphysics discourages a cause to the experience of the dream; so the author of the story are the angels. Find photo and art of chaff versus grain, and to call the surviving product from opposites to be the horses to draw along the dreamer. Topics also include to lack the keys of the experience; so to encounter torment, illness or violence. The dreamer takes a step into miracles from the product. The page turning does not exactly locate other than a requirement to use mind; so Aristotle recommends against direct 'cause'. Within the larger context of cultural memory, family pictures have become one of the most intriguing multi- and interdisciplinary fields of investigation in the past decade. This field brings together artists working in different media (e.g. documentary photography and film, photo-based painting and installations, digital art, collage, montage,

This volume intends to offer a broad, panoramic view of the topic combining West and East European as well as American perspectives.
