Day Trading vs. Swing Trading: What's the Difference?

Day trading and swing trading both offer freedom in the sense that a trader is their boss. Traders typically work on their own. They are responsible for funding their accounts and for all losses and profits generated. One can argue that swing traders have more freedom because swing trading takes up less time than day trading.

Day Trading vs. Swing Trading - The Balance

Swing traders are similar to day traders except that their time horizon is longer. They may hold trades for two to six days, and perhaps even for a few weeks. Both day and swing trading involves a deep study and knowledge of markets, news, technical analysis, and the development of a trading strategy. They need to master their emotions and have the discipline to stick with their strategy.
