Koda

Ireland, 1917. Darcy is a light gray Connemara pony with silver dapples. She's fast and tough, whether she's pulling a load of peat from the bog or riding around the rugged countryside with Shannon McKenna, her human family's eldest daughter. But when Mrs. McKenna needs a doctor, Darcy discovers a skill that will change her and her family's life forever. Like Black Beauty, this moving novel is told in first person from the horse's point of view and includes an appendix full of photos and facts about Connemara ponies and Irish history.

Enjoying her life at a ninth-century Arabian Desert oasis, orphaned filly Yatimah learns about her true birthright when the colt who is her foster brother is stolen in a raid, in a story complemented by facts about Arabian horses and Bedouin culture. Simultaneous.

Born on a windy hill off the coast of Ireland in 1917, a Connemara pony named Darcy is sold to a farm family and trained to pull a cart and plow.

Horsewoman Rebecca Ondov uses a tween’s love of horses and diaries to encourage girls 8 to 12 years old to write down their thoughts, explore their dreams, and discover more about God and themselves. Energetic graphics, fun thoughts, and special horse photos decorate this cheerful diary, while helpful questions and activities guide their journaling. Horses aren’t the only creatures designed to do special things. Did you know God created you with special talents? What do you like to do? Have you thought of God as having a huge imagination? Look at all the different horses He created. Why not draw or cut out pictures of different breeds of horses and paste them below? Tween girls will enjoy reading and writing in this diary, and they’ll discover important biblical truths to help them grow spiritually.

In the mid- to late-1930s, Risky Chance grows from a spirited colt to a winning racehorse, but an injury and the Great Depression bring hardship that only a special little girl can help him overcome.

A true outback adventure, with vivid characters, both equine and human, and lots humour. Lizzie Spender felt that at the age of 53 she had spent her life avoiding risks. So when a friend offered her a horse - one she had to catch from a mob of brumbies running across a Kimberley property almost the size of England - Lizzie knew she had to accept the gift and the challenge. Her aunt had left her some money - enough for Lizzie to take herself off on a holiday, perhaps buy something nice, or finance this trip to the outback to catch her wild horse. Lizzie knew immediately where Aunt Christine’s gift would go. Since she was a little girl she had wanted a horse. This was the dream of a lifetime and she was finally going to make it come true. WILD HORSE DIARIES is the very personal story of Lizzie’s determination to achieve something that many people would have thought was simply mad or worse, very dangerous. She writes with wit, honesty and an immediacy that will let you feel you are with her under the hot Western Australian sun.

Animal Autobiographical Writing

For thousands of years, in the myths and folktales of people around the world, animals have spoken in human tongues. Western and non-Western literary and folkloric traditions are filled with both speaking animals, some of whom even narrate or write their own autobiographies. Animals speak, famously, in children’s stories and in cartoons and films, and today, social networking sites and blogs are both sites in which animals—primarily pets—write about their daily lives and interests. Speaking for Animalsis a compilation of chapters written from a variety of disciplines that attempts to get a handle on this cross cultural and longstanding tradition of animal speaking and writing. It looks at speaking animals in literature, religious texts, poetry, social networking sites, comic books, and in animal welfare materials and even library catalogs, and addresses not just the “whys” of speaking animals, but the implications, for the animals and for ourselves.
