Ned Matheson knows Fila Sahar has been to hell and back after being held captive by the Taliban for over a decade. She's lost her parents, her home, and ten years of her life. Now she's safely back on American soil, but her fears have her so hemmed in, she might as well be a prisoner again. Ned knows he can't date her, let alone marry her, until she's regained her courage. He's confident he's found the perfect solution—he'll get her a restaurant she can call her own. Fila cares for Ned more than she can say, and she's grateful for the home he's given her on his family's ranch, but before she can give her heart to any man, she has to find the courage to reenter society. When Ned surprises her with his perfect solution—the restaurant he's leased and renovated in her name—she doesn't know how to tell him she can't imagine being brave enough to ever run it. So when Ned's father sends him out of town to check on the family's remote hunting cabin, she's grateful for the delay. Ned knows his father wants to split him and Fila up, so there's no way he's leaving town without taking her wrong for her, Cole Linden. Cole's been struggling to save his family's holdings for far too long. The indoor rifle range he inherited from his father barely pays its rent, but it's all that's keeping his other concerns—two apartment houses—afloat. If he was smart, he'd walk away from all of it and start over, but if he does, several of Chance Creek's inhabitants will find themselves without a home. He thought Cecily meant to leave him the range building in her will. Instead she's set him up on a four-month-long competition with her big-city niece to see who will win the prize. A niece whose knockout looks are making it damn hard for him to concentrate on the job at hand. Sunshine can't believe she'll have to open a vegan restaurant in the rifle-range waiting room, and she can't believe she'll have to share her apartment with Cole, either. Cole can't believe his friends are falling over themselves to help Sunshine succeed—and get a date with her. Now the competition is getting hot, the sparks flying between them are even hotter. Can Cole and Sunshine find a way they both can win?
