humankind tells of a twenty-first century California clan caught between two clashing worlds, one based on tolerance, the other on repression. Declaration of the Four Sacred Things The earth is a living, conscious being. In company with cultures of many different times and places, we name these things as sacred: air, fire, water, and earth. Whether we see them as the breath, energy, blood, and body of the Mother, or as the blessed gifts of a Creator, or as symbols of the interconnected systems that sustain life, we know that nothing can live without them. To call these things sacred is to say that they have a value beyond their usefulness for human ends, that they themselves became the standards by which our acts, our economics, our laws, and our purposes must be judged. no one has the right to appropriate them or profit from them at the expense of others. Any government that fails to protect them forfeits its legitimacy. All people, all living things, are part of the earth life, and so are sacred. No one of us stands higher or lower than any other. Only justice can assure balance: only ecological balance can sustain freedom. Only in freedom can that fifth sacred thing we call spirit flourish in its full diversity. To honor the sacred is to create conditions in which nourishment, sustenance, habitat, knowledge, freedom, and beauty can thrive. To honor the sacred is to make love possible. To this we dedicate our curiosity, our will, our courage, our

With this belief came the idea it was his civil right to procure what could be gleaned from the land, regardless of environmental rules and regulations. This attitude led to trouble. Death is so very much a part of life, she told her children conditioning them to face-up to whatever fate had in store. Two brothers age from youthful to walk in their fathers footsteps while learning to hunt, trap, and fish. Everyday living meant no electricity, no indoor plumbing or centralized heating. Communication was only by snail-mail, and news was often read as history by the time it was received. Babies were born at home. Illness was treated with simple remedies, often homemade. Invention was the greater part of recreation. Faith was practiced more through neighborly acts of charity than organized religion. Most holidays recognized together and treated as just another day. These subjects, and others, are written as anecdotes and smack of hardship and deprivation for the family, yet as recalled by the author, We did not miss what we never experienced. L.R.
