"Data versus Goliath" is probably the best way to prepare for such a debate. It concisely summarizes the technological background that is necessary to understand the surveillance that is gradually built around us. It creates a sense of urgency by sketching the scope of the surveillance and what's at stake for us as society as well as individuals.

The accumulated data can probably paint a better picture of how you spend your time than you can, because it doesn't have to rely on human memory. In 2012, researchers were able to use this data to predict where people would be 24 hours later, to within 20 meters. Before cell phones, if someone wanted to know all of this,
