Clean waterways, abundant prey stocks and vegetated banks are otter musts. The best time to see otters is at dawn but you will need to be still and patient, walk quietly, and keep upwind. Look for telltale tracks and signs, such as distinctive webbed toe prints in soft riverbank mud. And spraints (droppings, often containing fish bones and scales) left at strategic points along an otter ' s territory, such as beneath bridges.

(Inside Science) -- No one has ever confused sea otters with humans. They are furry, aquatic mustelids -- the taxonomic family that includes such carnivorous mammals as weasels, ferrets, badgers and similar animals. And humans, of course, are upright-walking, language-creating primates. Yet, the two creatures share at least one similarity: They both manipulate and use tools.

Seeing the signs of otters is far easier than seeing the animals themselves. Along riverbanks and waterways, look for five-toed footprints (about 6-7cm long) and droppings or 'spraints'. Otters leave spraints in prominent places, such as fallen trees, weirs and bridges, as 'scented messages', helping them to find mates and defend territories.
