The Life of the Mind was the final work of Hannah Arendt, and was unfinished at the time of her death. Designed to be in three parts, only the first two had been completed and the first page of the third part was in her typewriter the evening of the day she suddenly died. The unfinished work was edited by her friend, the author, Mary McCarthy and published in two volumes in 1977 and 1978.

The Life of the Mind

Directed by Miguel Melo Queiroz. With Declan O'Connor, Jamie Robson. Julian Rayes is a geneticist researching lifespan, confronted with the very paradox of wanting to prolong life, while regarding it as a mere by-product of matter, void of any meaning or purpose.

Life of the Mind (2020) - IMDb

The Life of the Mind explores the thinking and writing on the subject of human thought, will and judgement throughout history. It starts with the ancient Greeks, the Romans, and went all the way via Kant and Hegel to Nietzsche, Heidegger and some contemporary philosophers.

Thinking aims at and ends in contemplation, and contemplation is not an activity but a passivity; it is the point where mental activity comes to rest. According to traditions of Christian time, when philosophy had become the handmaiden of theology, thinking became meditation, and meditation again ended in contemplation, a kind of blessed state of the soul where the mind was no longer stretching out to know the truth but, in anticipation of a future state, received it temporarily in intuition...
