Multiword units: Idioms and Collocations Roughly speaking, idioms are expressions whose meaning cannot be completely understood from the meanings of the component parts. For example, whereas it is possible to work out the meaning of (a) on the basis of knowledge of English grammar and the meaning of words, this would not be sufficient to work out that (b) can mean something like 'If Sam dies ...

Multiword units: Idioms and Collocations
Multi-word expressions (MWEs) are complex lexical units, for example verbal idioms (bite the bullet) or frozen adverbials (all at once). Others, such as particle verbs (stick out) or complex nominals (day-care center), indicate a close relationship between MWEs and word-formation units. Focusing on this

(PDF) Multilingual Aspects of Multiword Lexical Units
Both compounds and multi-word expressions are complex lexical units, made up of at least two constituents. The most basic difference is that the former are morphological objects and the latter result from syntactic processes. However, the exact demarcation between compounds and multi-word expressions differs greatly from language to language and is often a matter of debate in and across languages.

A number of properties of MWEs, recognised both in linguistic theory and in NLP, distinguish them from single-word lexical units. Their most obvious characteristic – that they consist of two or more parts, or words 2 - has various consequences for their treatment in dictionaries and in NLP lexicons. Individual elements within MWEs can be limited to particular forms in their (morphological) paradigms.
