Preces and Responses - ChoralWiki

Preces are, in liturgical worship, short petitions that are said or sung as versicle and response by the officiant and congregation respectively. This form of prayer is one of the oldest in Christianity, finding its source in the pre-Christian Hebrew prayers of the Psalms in Temple Worship. In many prayer books, the versicles, to be spoken or sung by the priest, and the following responses, spoken or sung by the congregation, are denoted by special glyphs: Versicle: V̄, a letter V crossed ...

Preces and Responses. These are short petitions that are sung alternately as versicle (by the precentor) and response (by the choir, and sometimes congregation). This form of prayer is one of the oldest in Christianity, finding its source in the pre-Christian Hebrew prayers of the Psalms in Temple Worship.

~~Music : Choral Evensong~~

The Preces and Responses are part of the choral evensong service in the Church of England and in Episcopal and Anglican churches around the world. They make an interesting case study for Dorico because they consist of a series of short versicles sung by a cantor, each one followed by a response sung by the choir, and this is an ideal fit both for Dorico's multi-flow and page layout features.

Description. Preces and Responses. Stephan Casurella. A new entry into the repertory of Evening responses, this is characterized by flowing movement and mild dissonance with a particularly lovely final Amen. English organist, conductor, and composer Stephan Casurella (b. 1973) wrote this charming setting of the Preces and Responses for Roger Fischer and the Choir of Chester Cathedral as a young fourteen-year-old composer.

Setting the Preces and Responses is a delicate balancing act, creating a microcosm with consistency and variety within a small span. Further, composers have options including whether to use traditional intonations for the officiant (as all four of these do), Rite I language (again, as all these settings do), and whether to include through-composed Lesser Litany and Lord's Prayer.
