We use the Compton scattering formula (Equation 2.17). We write the Compton scattering formula, defining the scattering angle ("?") as 90 degrees and the photon energy ("E0 ") as 1 MeV. Energy $E_0 \cos \theta = E_0 \frac{c^2}{1 + \frac{E_0}{m_e c^2} (1 - \cos \theta)}$ We substitute $\theta = 90^\circ$ and $E_0 = 1 \text{ MeV}$ to get the energy of the scattered photon in MeV.

Radiation detection and measurement – Nuclear System

Since an x-ray must essentially be created by the de-excitation of a single electron, the maximum energy of an x-ray emitted in a tube operating at a potential of 195 kV must be 195 keV. Therefore, we can use the equation $E=h\nu$?, which is also $E=hc/\lambda$?, or Radiation dosimeters based upon ionization chambers have two basic components: the detector chamber which produces electrical charge when irradiated and an associated electrometer, which is an electronic amplifier to which the chamber is connected which is designed specifically for the purpose of measuring charge. The response of the dosimeter represents the response of the chamber to radiation together with the accuracy and consistency of the electrometer in measuring the charge.

A Mobile Detection System is an advanced mobile solution for radiation survey, patrol and isotope identification in applications such as nuclear incident response, radiological hotspot identification, environmental contamination detection and routine security surveillance. Some systems make it possible to easily survey an area to determine the baseline radiation contour so known areas of higher radiation such as hospitals and highway underpasses can be noted, eliminating the need to ...
