The Devil To Pay Silhouette Nocturne Numbered
Don't you know damnation pays every man's scores... we knew we should have the Devil to pay one time or other, and now you see like honest men we have pawn'd our Souls for the whole Reckoning. This quotation pre-dates the earliest recorded usage of 'devil' to mean the seam of a ship (Smyth's Sailor's Word-Book, 1867) by more than a century. Given the known nautical meaning of 'paying' a seam and the well-established phrase 'the Devil to pay', sailors probably adopted the phrase in reference ...
