Synopsis. In a movie theater near Worcester, MA (called The Flick) -- one of the few that hasn't yet switched to digital film -- three employees work dreary jobs for just above minimum wage: selling tickets, cleaning up after patrons, and running the projector. The economy is depressed and so are they, and yet over the course of this Pulitzer Prize-winning drama, Sam, Rose, and Avery show themselves to be complex, feeling people with unrealized ambitions to become more than their dreary ...

The Flick, by Annie Baker - The Pulitzer Prizes
Few are the plays I've read all the way through in one day because I'm so spellbound by them. Kristoffer Diaz's The Elaborate Entrance of Chad Deity was the most recent, and now Annie Baker's The Flick joins the list. Baker's writing is understated, gracefully funny, and the three main characters fully realized.

Annie Baker's The Flick teaches us quite the opposite when it comes to play-acting, subtlety, and nuance. When I first read the script, preparing to direct The Flick, the words immediately came to life off the page as a result of Ms. Baker's knack for honest dialogue and attentive care for stage directions.

Silence is Key in Annie Baker's THE FLICK - Breaking Character
Annie Baker's Pulitzer-winning script for "The Flick," newly opened at Steppenwolf Theatre, gives us a chance to get to know three people, underpaid workers in a movie theater in Worcester County, Massachusetts.

The Flick Review | CultureVulture
Pauses and moments of reflection are spelled out very clearly by Annie Baker: scripted stage directions include: "A happy Pause in which they realize they've broken the tension, and then an awkward pause following that happy pause..." and "A very long, uncomfortable pause"—it is interesting to note these, because Baker is clearly creating acting moments within pauses.

A note on run time & use of silence in Annie Baker's The Flick
The work that led the venue Playwrights Horizons to reassure its riled subscribers – The Flick, set in a shabby, old-fashioned Massachusetts cinema – went on to win the Susan Smith Blackburn prize...
