~~The Lamplighter by Jackie Kay | booklove~~

This is a slim volume with a huge content. In a poetic chorale of individual, distinctive female voices, Jackie Kay's first play creates the world of the slave from capture in the African village through the appalling sea journeys to the markets and then to the sugar plantations of the West Indies. The style is deliberately non-naturalistic, and is aural rather than visual, the impact of the voices allowing the reader or listener to create the appalling images in his/her own imagination.
