In discourse analysis, the context of a conversation is taken into account as well as what's being said. This context may encompass a social and cultural framework, including the location of a speaker at the time of the discourse, as well as nonverbal cues such as body language, and, in the case of textual communication, it may also include images and symbols.

Discourse Analysis: Observing the Human Use of Language
 Frohmann (1994, p. 120) wrote: "Discourse analysis takes discourse as its object of analysis. Its data is talk: not what the talk refers to but the talk itself." Frohmann placed discourse analysis as a research method in information science as analogous to other qualitative methodologies. The classical theory of symbolic interactionism was described by Blumer (1969) and is the umbrella concept underlying qualitative methods. The theory is based on the notion that humans interact ...
