The Wanderer Translated by Charles W. Kennedy . Oft to the wanderer, Weary of exile, Comes God's pity:
Compassionate love, Although woefully toiling on wintry seas, With churning oar in the icy wave, Homeless and helpless he fled from fate. Thus says the wanderer mindful of misery, previous disasters and death of kin:

The song clearly comes from this section of The Wanderer. (A more strictly literal translation of "mago" would be "youth", hence "Where is the horse gone? Where the young man?" -- but since the horse and the youth appear in the same half-line, Tolkien's rendering "rider" is very hard to resist.)

The Wanderer Translated By Charles W Kennedy

The Wanderer Summary. The first speaker in the poem introduces us to a "lone-dweller," whom he says is hoping for God's mercy and favor despite being condemned to travel alone over an ice-cold sea. He says the lines that follow as the speech of an "earth-stepper," who is probably this same "lone-dweller" we've just met.

Charles Baudelaire, 'Le joueur généreux' ('The Generous Gambler', translated by Francis Scarfe)

Yesterday, in the thick of the crowd on the boulevard I felt a mysterious Being brush against me, someone I had always wanted to know. I recognized him at once although I had never seen him before.

Baudelaire and the flâneur – The Urban Wanderer

The Wanderer's monologue divides into two distinct parts, the first being a lament for his exile and the loss of kin, friends, home, and the generosity of his king. In nature he finds no comfort ...
